[illegible]

I have included a few examples of places where the scribe has corrected himself at once, as at 15[a] and 69[a], but since these are quite frequent and of no textual interest, several other cases have been tacitly passed over. The second hand, which has made a number of corrections, may not date from much later than the original scribe. In two places an obvious corruption in the text can be corrected from Abraham bar Lipeh's abbreviation of Gabriel's work (see 56[a] and 72[a]).

1[a] written twice.

[b] ms אִיחָדוֹת

2[a] perhaps read כָּאֵלֶּה

11[a] ms מַעֲבָדִים

[b] ms מַעֲבָדִים

14[a] = margin m.2; om. text.

[b] = margin m.2; om. text (the indicator of the correction is placed in the wrong place in the text).
